Beauty Is Chiefly Mental

BY LILLIAN RUSSELL.

Copyright, 1914, by Lillian Russell.
Beauty is chiefly mental, not physical. Even the years cannot ravage one's good looks unless the mind consents. Beauty is not skin deep. It is one's whole being. Woman lives her beauty through her mind, according to her own dictates.

"Keeping alive the spirit of youth," said Robert Louis Stevenson, "is the perennial spring of all the mental faculties."

The fountain of youth and beauty, hunted long by explorers and chemists in their different lines, lies within ourselves. Even the plainest face becomes beautiful if one is determined to be beautiful and maintains peace of mind and freedom from worry, thinks clean thoughts, and preserves a spirit of optimism.

No matter how exquisitely nature has chiseled our countenances, if we lack the will power and force of character to keep beautiful, if we succumb to the traces of worry, unclean thoughts, and a pessimism as to the present and future, we cannot be beautiful.

Perpetual renewal of our youth through the long years lies within ourselves and is a mental acquirement available to all who wish to embrace it. Just as soon as we realize that worry and discord, the foes of beauty, are due to the state of our own minds and thoughts, just as soon as we determine to keep them out of our minds, just as soon as we determine to abide in peace and happiness, no matter what our environments may be, just as soon as we decide that we will be attractive, then we will be beautiful.

By right thinking we maintain our health and preserve our beauty.

Remember: Great are the victories of mind, but the greatest are health and beauty.

Lillian Russell's Answers.
Lillian: I am sorry, but I cannot recommend a freckle bleach already on the market, but can give you a formula for an excellent one. Any drugist will make it up for you, and it is inexpensive. Send me the required stamped addressed envelope and I shall gladly send it to you.

G. L.: I cannot give you anything that will make your hair permanently wavy. If your hair is straight, why do you want it wavy? The only curlers, these give the hair a pretty, natural wave and are absolutely harmless. Dampen the hair just a little with water, or, if you wish to keep the hair curled for several days, rub it with a good curling fluid. Send me a stamped addressed envelope and I shall send you a formula for a curling fluid.

E. W.: Massage your face with a good skin food. This will make it more plump. Massage your neck with the skin food or coconut oil, rub it well into the hollows. Do not use the coconut oil on the face, it is too heavy. Deep breathing will help to make the neck more plump. If your eyes are dull and tired, would better consult a good oculist. Your eyes may be a little weak or strained. For your every day use, wash your eyes with a good eye wash made of boric acid, using an eye cup. This will make your eyes brighter. Be careful not to make their eyes reading. Do not read in a dim light or with the light striking the eyes. The light should always fall over the left shoulder. Rest your eyes as much as you can. When they feel tired, close them for a few moments. This rests the eyes. Send me a stamped addressed envelope and I will send you a formula for the eye wash, and the formula for skin food and directions for massaging the face.

Reader: I shall be happy to send you the dietary, exercises and formula for reducing the flesh and bust if you will send me a stamped addressed envelope. I am sorry I cannot print them for you, but my space is limited.

Bertha: The first thing for you to do for the bunion is to wear shoes wide enough to allow the toes to spread in their natural position. Bunions are usually caused from ill-fitting shoes, and they can be remedied. Place cotton between the great and second toes large enough to keep them apart and put the joint into place. The adhesive plaster bandage is also good. Place the adhesive plaster around the great toe, then pull it out so the joint is in its proper place, and bind the plaster around the foot, holding the toe in place, not so tight that it is uncomfortable or so you cannot walk. This will relieve all inflammation, and in a short time the bunion will disappear. There are instruments on the market that keep the toe in place. I cannot give you the names of them, but I am sure any drugist will carry them. If you will send me a stamped addressed envelope I will send you a formula for using the green soap treatment.

Dr. Brady's Health Talks

Fairy Tales Poison Children's Minds.

Censorship of moving picture films is carried out particularly for the welfare of children. No matter what may be the influence of suggestive scenes upon the mature mind, we all know the harm of immoral suggestion upon the impressionable mind of the young child. Fairy tales have always been considered a legitimate and elevating form of entertainment for children. Some of the stories written by Andersen, the Grimms and other noted authors, are classics. "Bluebeard," "Jack the Giant-Killer," "Cinderella," "Little Red Riding Hood," "Golden-Locker" and the "Three Bears, Beauty and the Beast" who would think that such ancient legends would harm a child's mind?

Don't Be Bound by Tradition.
Because a thing is old and long established is no good reason for saying it isn't wrong. Our ancestors found fairy tales almost indispensable for want of books. To-day we have plenty of truthful and interesting stories for young children. We need not draw on our sickly and distorted imagination of the past that nothing amuses the children so much as a story of a fairy tale. The hearing of simple incidents from a real childhood experience, or incidents which might happen to anybody in real life.

Professor Freud, the famous medical psychologist and other authorities in the field of nervous and mental diseases, have shown how impressions made upon the childish mind by fairy tales tend to eliminate the normal thoughts. In many cases these impressions lead to the development of abnormal and even to the development of the hearing of simple incidents from a real childhood experience, or incidents which might happen to anybody in real life.

magazine, and the evil, suggestive thoughts engendered in the child's mind by a Bluebeard recital or any other portrayal of wickedness?

Consign the fairy stories to the furnace flames and nourish the children's mind with true nature stories or pictures of real life. They will have sweeter dreams—especially sweeter day-dreams.

Carrot Day

BY JANE EDDINGTON.

If we had a different food for each calendar day of the year August 25 could be called Carrot Day. One reason for this is based on a mistake made because two towns in different parts of France bear the same name, during the whole month of August new carrots are the best and least expensive of any time of the year, so some day in the month might be dedicated to them.

It is about which the mistake arose is a war time fact, thus reported some years ago by a joking plebe of England: "H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, according to report, ate a carrot soup on August 25. The French call it Carrot Day, because their best carrots grow there, and they may be remembered, was also the scene of a great battle, when one Englishman was killed for every five Frenchmen." This latter statement is considerably exaggerated.

A French book on vegetables has, in many other books in both French and English, soups for Carrot Day, but it says that the name was given to the soup because carrots grow so abundantly around the strongly fortified city of Paris. The famous battle fought on August 26, 1316, with 30,000 Englishmen against 100,000 Frenchmen was in another Carrot. At the battle of Tewkesbury, the Prince of Wales, won his spurs and took for his motto that of the King of Bohemia, who lost his life fighting for France in this battle. "Ich Dien" has been used ever since by Princes of Wales.

Besides the carrots of Carrot Day of Vichy are also very famous. Those who have read the book mentioned above, that there is an enormous consumption of these because they are considered a specific for liver troubles. The dietitian Gouraud says: "Hepatitis may, as a rule, make extensive and more or less justifiable use of them. If thoroughly cooked and mashed, dyspeptics need not fear for them."

Somewhat over a year ago there was an Associated Press dispatch from Paris to the effect: "Eat carrots and live 100 years." This advice came from the great Metchnikoff, of the Pasteur Institute, who said that they contained a sugar which killed old bacteria and thus made them healthy. The item also refers to that great health resort of Vichy and to the Carrot soup.

It says: "It has been remembered that carrots from the daily food at Vichy, and the chefs of the big hotels are inventing recipes to satisfy the taste of the moment. Carrot soup, everybody knows, is but mashed carrots diluted with milk, and at the fashionable gatherings in the Bois de Boulogne restaurants Friday evening there is scarcely a table where this soup is not served."

No two recipes for Carrot, or Carrot soup agree. Sometimes carrots, onions, and celery to flavor are gently fried, cooked in stock, mashed and thinned with milk or stock. Plain steamed, mashed carrots may be used, and glazed carrots always make a successful soup as they do a fine vegetable, and garnish.

Carrot Purée—Boil one pint of water and slice into it enough carrots to cook well covered. Add a little salt two tablespoons of sugar and two ounces of butter. Cook until the liquid is nearly all absorbed, mash, and then to taste with milk or meat stock.

THE KAUFMANN STORE

Are You the Woman

Who "can't bear" the bibb, ugly canotiers? Then for your comfort and pleasure be it known that small hats are by no means to be discarded. On the contrary, many of the cleverest models shown are of limited dimensions. There is the charming black velvet "tricorn," the small draped turban, some round, others elongated and making up in height what they lack in width. The trimmings consist of a jet ornament in spike shape or birds' wings, flowers and bows.

Large Hats have by no means cornered the market in popularity. Small Hats are so fetching, so altogether chic, they are quite capable of holding their own.
